Hello Abdulla,

We've discussed the contract and we came up with some of our own opinions and questions. We wanted to let you know that we find that the contract is weak and doesn't protect us as the client in the NDA. Als we've come up with some questions regarding the making of the app. We'd be glad to hear very soon from you again.

Best regards,

Emely

Hi Abdulla,

I appreciate your detailed proposal and the quick responses so far. Before we move forward, there are a few points I'd like to align on:

1. Mockups Before Development

The partners I'm working with require a nearly realistic mock-up of the app before the development phase starts.

I want to confirm:

- Whether you can create high-fidelity UI mockups for the core screens (dashboard, payment flow, transactions, payout, onboarding).
- That these mockups can be delivered before we begin milestone 1.
- That we structure a small initial payment specifically for the mockup stage, before committing to the full project.

Let me know if that's workable for you.

2. Pricing & Milestones

Your structure is clear, but I want to rebalance it so there's less upfront pressure and more equal distribution across milestones.

Also, to be direct:

$5,300 for the full build is on the higher side for my current budget.

I respect the work, the skill, and the time required, I'm not asking for a discount "just because", but I'd like to discuss whether there's room to adjust the price so it fits both sides.

So my proposal is:

- A smaller first payment (mockup-only stage)
- More evenly divided milestone payments afterward
- And a conversation about bringing the total cost down a bit

Let me know what flexibility you have.

3. NDA Adjustments

I reviewed the NDA, and a few changes are required before signing:

- I should be listed as the Disclosing Party, and you as the Receiving Party.
- Add governing law: Netherlands.
- Add a clause stating that all concepts, architecture, mockups, and business ideas remain my intellectual property, even if the project stops.
- Duration fixed (e.g., 3-5 years), not "until confidential information is no longer confidential."
- Add a clause preventing reuse, resale, or sharing of any project components without written approval.

These are standard protections.

Hi Emily,

I hope you're doing well.

Thank you for your detailed response I truly appreciate the clarity.

Let me address each point so we're fully aligned.

1. Mockups Before Development

Yes, absolutely, we will begin with UI/UX design and high fidelity mockups.

As I mentioned in the milestone breakdown, the first milestone is dedicated to UI/UX and prototype design, which includes the core screens:

- Dashboard
- Payment flow
- Transactions
- Payout
- Onboarding

During this phase:

- You'll receive realistic, high-fidelity mockups.
- We will provide unlimited revisions.
- We will not move into front-end development until you are 100% satisfied.

So effectively, the first milestone already functions as the mockup stage before any development begins.

Once you approve the design, we proceed to the front-end, then the back-end, and finally deployment.

If you're comfortable starting with UI/UX as the first milestone, we can move forward immediately with that stage.

2. Pricing & Milestones

I completely understand your concern regarding the budget and milestone balance.

The current structure already separates the design phase first to reduce upfront pressure.

That said, I'm open to slightly adjusting milestone distribution to make it more balanced for you.

Regarding the total project cost:

I always price projects based on:

- Scope
- Architecture complexity
- Scalability requirements
- Security standards
- Long-term maintainability

I've built similar complex applications before, so the pricing reflects realistic development effort and quality delivery.

That said, I'm not closed to discussion.

If you have a specific budget range in mind, feel free to share it I can see what flexibility is possible. I may not be able to reduce significantly, but I'm open to reviewing it respectfully.

3. NDA Adjustments

Regarding the NDA:

Since you require governing law under the Netherlands, it would be best if you prepare the NDA according to your legal structure and send it to me.

I will:

- Review it carefully
- Sign it
- Send it back promptly

I have no issue with standard clauses such as:

- IP ownership remains yours
- Fixed duration (3-5 years)
- Non-reuse / non-resale protections

That is completely reasonable.

If everything sounds aligned, we can proceed with the UI/UX milestone and begin the mockup phase immediately.

Looking forward to your response.

Best regards,
Mahmud

Hi Mahmud

Thanks for the detailed and professional response, this clears things up well.

Before we move to the next steps, one clarification:

The founder/owner of the app concept is O'Brian Valorian. Emely was helping with initial communication, but I (O'Brian) will be handling the project directly from here on, since I'm the one with the full vision and requirements of how the system should function.

Regarding the project flow: I'm aligned with starting through a UI/UX mockup phase before any development begins. That works for me.

Regarding the pricing structure, what I'd like to do is make the first milestone smaller and distribute the remaining costs more evenly across the next stages. This reduces pressure on my side and keeps the commitment gradual and balanced.

About the total cost, I'm not looking for a big reduction, but I do want to adjust it slightly so it fits my current budget more realistically. I'm proposing $5000 USD
If you can review the overall price and propose a revised structure that's a bit more flexible, I'm open to that conversation.

On the NDA: I'll prepare a new version with the required clauses and send it over, so we can both sign from a clean legal baseline.

Once we finalize:

- updated NDA
- revised milestone distribution
- adjusted overall pricing

we can start with the UI/UX mockups immediately.

Looking forward to your proposal.

Best,
O'Brian

Mahmud,

Great, I'm happy to move forward and start the project.

Let's aim to build something solid and high-quality.
For the UI, please use the Mollie app as the primary reference. Their interface is extremely clean, minimal, and has the "Apple-quality" look and feel I want for this application. The design direction is: simple, modern, smooth animations, professional fintech.

If you have any questions at all: technical, functional, or design-related, ask me immediately. I want the process to stay fast and clear on both sides.

Looking forward to getting started.

Regards,
O'Brian
